The 4th Asia-Pacific Conference on Public Health
Nha Trang, 21-22 November, 2013:

Online Registration is now open

The Vietnam Public Health Association is pleased to announce that the 4th Asia-Pacific Conference on Public Health (APCPH) will be held in Nha Trang City, Vietnam between 21-22 November, 2013. Online Registration is now open at www.apcphvn2013.com.

With the theme of "Climate Change and Population Health", the Conference will remind us of the emerging threat to public health not only in Vietnam but also in many other parts of the world. Climate change has been affecting, and will continue to affect the health status of different generations and population groups, patterns of morbidity and mortality, the rich-poor health gap, social stability, geo-political security, etc.

Two days of Conference will be devoted to the triangle of climate change and population health components involving:

- Climate Change (CC) and Population Health: Risks, Impacts and Responses
- Country specific policy for climate change and population health and lessons learnt
- Community Based intervention on climate change and health.

A wide range of topics such as Climate changes-Water, sanitation and health nexus; climate change and emerging and re-emerging diseases; climate change, gender and vulnerable groups; responsibilities of health sector to impacts of Climate change; etc.

The Vietnam Public Health Association, as an active member of the World Federation of Public Health Associations, is honored to welcome all public health professionals, public health associations and other related agencies, together with researchers, policy makers to joining us for this important event in November 2013. We hope that this Conference will be a mutual platform for participants to share and learn from each other’s experiences, and further define the best ways to mitigate health impacts from climate change.
